Future Search Conference

Learn from the past, using the present, developing the future.

Together we identify the milestones of the past and the challenges of the present.

What made us strong in the past and on which aspects do we want to build on? In which direction do we want to develop and what helps us to get there? Which trends and developments do we have to notice to have medium-term and long-term success?

The result of this future workshop is the clarity about the future vision and the way to go. We often link the concept with elements from strategy development, like for example a SWOT-analysis.

The goal: Concrete plans of action are designed in direct exchange of all participants, ideas that matter result from the personal exchange of the right people.

The future search conference will be made-to-measure: With you for your organization. The concept is planned for three days.

Trainers: Ralf Messbacher and Peter Neumann
