

Training: From Group to Crew -Leading Teams

This training is an expedition through the dynamics of groups and the diversity of the possibilities of designing team- and communication situations. The seminar shows how you as a leader can design a positive team culture and how you quickly achieve non-crackling results with a high level of identification and without misunderstandings in workshops and meetings. Next to many trainer inputs and exercises, the training leaves enough space for individual case work with elements of considerate and friendly counsel.

Goals

The participants can create trust within their team as leaders or project leaders and control group processes to achieve set goals and actively design communication and feedback processes.
